Henry Ford’s Rotunda
In 1934, during the second year of the Chicago World's Fair, Henry Ford, the commissioner of the Auto Court, introduced the world to his latest invention. As part of a massive display of early Ford models, a massive 12½-foot tall & 11½-foot round Rotunda was erected on Michigan Ave. in Chicago. The structure was designed by Architect Neil Elizur Newton to house the famous Ford Rotunda display that he had built for his 1932 Ford Motor Company exhibit at the Chicago World's Fair. The Rotunda measured 67 x 67 feet & had a floor area of 4,747 square feet. It was the only exhibit on the fairgrounds that was open to the public at all times. The structure was dismantled after the fair, & is currently located in the Ford Museum in Dearborn, MI. The Rotunda now contains a large collection of early Ford products, including rare and unique vehicles, engines, and other artifacts. It is open to the public from 10:00 AM to 5:00 PM, Tuesday through Sunday, and admission is free. Henry Ford’s Rotunda is a must-see for anyone interested in early Ford history!
